The Contura 600 range is expanding in style and size

The popular Contura 600 stove is becoming more stylish, growing larger and changing its name to Contura 600 Style. New surrounds, doors and colours all enhance its look, along with many upgraded features, including automatic start, booster system, silent ash pan and, not least, improved combustion technology.

“The Contura 600 range produces more heat per log. It’s an imposing and elegant stove that stands out and adds beauty and style to any large space in the home,” says Phil Wood, UK Sales Director for Contura.

Fire is hot – and makes a statement. The new Contura 600 range brings large, beautiful fires to large and beautiful rooms. The stoves in one of Contura's most popular ranges have now been given a make-over.

Contura 610 Style – the smallest of the heavyweights. There's a choice of cast-iron or glass door, and artstone or metal surround. The line of accessories has been extended to include an attractive, practical log storage compartment alongside the stove.

Contura 620 Style – a magnificent statement piece with heat-retaining powerstone and convection damper as standard. It features a robust cast-iron door and the lower compartment can be fitted with a cover.

Contura 620T – enveloped in heat-retaining soapstone. If you prefer a front cover instead of a warming shelf above the door, choose powerstone for even more heat. A cover can be fitted to the lower compartment.

Contura 690 models – a lot of everything. A large blazing fire raised well above the floor. The models come with a choice of three colours, two doors, two surrounds, a lower door as standard, and optional log storage and heat-retaining powerstone.

“The Contura 600 Style range takes a place of prominence and fills a home with abundant heat and comfort,” says Phil Wood.

These state-of-the-art stoves are produced with great respect for the environment. And not only are their emissions far lower than earlier models, they are kind to the wallet too. Contura in Småland is the European market leader in the field and combines traditional Swedish engineering skills with modern design and finger tip sensitivity.
